ORDER:

PER CURIAM. This case is presently before us pursuant to the (b) (6) decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the (b) (6) v. Gonzales, (b) (6) (b) (6) (en banc). The court held that the inadmissibility of an alien who adjusts status under the Special Agricultural Worker (SAW) program is determined as of the date of admission for lawful temporary residence, not as of the date of adjustment to lawful permanent resident status.

The respondent in this case was convicted of a drug offense after he gained lawful temporary residence as a SAW on November 10, 1988, but before his status was automatically adjusted to lawful permanent resident status on December 1, 1990. The respondent was initially charged with removability as an alien convicted of a controlled substance offense and of an aggravated felony, but those charges were later withdrawn and he was charged with removability as an alien who was inadmissible at the time of adjustment of status. The court found that because the respondent was not inadmissible at the time he adjusted to lawful temporary status, the charge of removability could not stand.
